Barry Is Expected To Withdraw From Senate Race Today

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A three-judge federal court takes up again Monday a charge that an Atlanta restaurant owner has violated the new Civil Rights Act.

At the same time, the court ponders a motel owner's request that the government be prohibited from enforcing the act.

The court heard charges and counter-charges in the cases Friday in the first legal tests of the act.

In one case, brought by three Negroes and joined in by the government against the Atlanta restaurant owner, Lester Maddox, attorneys presented 19 witnesses in an attempt to prove that Maddox is guilty of violating the act.

In the other case, the court took under advisement the request of an Atlanta motel owner, Moreton Rolleston, that an injunction be issued prohibiting the government from enforcing the new law.

The judges promised a ruling soon on Rolleston's request for an injunction barring enforcement of the law.

The government has also filed a countersuit against Rolleston asking the court to prohibit his motel from refusing to serve Negroes.

Rolleston, who is also an attorney, pleaded the case for his Heart of Atlanta Motel alone, he faced a battery of lawyers from the Department of Justice and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The motel owner argued that Congress had no constitutional power to enact the civil rights law, not even under the Interstate Commerce Clause, the basis of the act.

If the Civil Rights Act is constitutional, Rolleston said, then Congress has the power to take over everything that used to be Sixty-nine-year-old Antonio Macaione started up his riding type mower Friday after supper and had just begun to do the weekend grass mowing.

As he neared a rock posted at the corner of the driveway, he steered the mower in a direction so that his back was to the road. Out of the blue, a station wagon with brakes screeching lunged into the yard, struck the rock and knocked a very shocked Antonio from his mower seat. Unaware in time to leap out of the way, the elderly man was pinned beneath his vehicle.

Students Train For Work In French-Speaking Nations

OBERLIN, Ohio (AP) — Bridge and Scrabble in French . . . French at lunch and dinner . . . French at nearly every opportunity.

That's how it goes for 135 students at the second annual program for Peace Corps trainees at Oberlin College. They are undergoing a nine-week indoctrination before leaving for Quebec to live with French families for four weeks.

The students include beginners, intermediates and advanced linguists. For those who pass the selection board, assignments are waiting in Gabon, the Ivory Coast and Togo — countries in French-speaking West and Equatorial Africa.

The trainees get four hours of classroom instruction in French daily. The men also must run a mile each day.

Robert Roza, a young native of Paris who is one of the instructors, said French at breakfast isn't necessarily encouraged.

"That's too early in the morning for most of us—even me," he said.

Roza recently was appointed assistant professor of French at Indiana University.

Oberlin Prof. Paul B. Arnold, project director, heads an administrative and teaching staff of 56.

About three-fourths of the successful trainees will teach English in the host countries.

The group includes a former car hop, a radio and dramatic producer, a governess, a house-wrecker and a model.

The program started here June 18 and will end Aug. 21. After a 10-day break, the training will resume at Laval University in Quebec — the first Peace Corps training outside the United States.

At Laval, the students will be assigned to live with French families, a new feature of the program. Their permanent assignments come four weeks later. Forty of 56 who reported to Oberlin in 1963 are now Peace Corps members.

FILES $10,000 SUIT

LISBON — A suit for $10,000 for personal injuries and damages allegedly stemming from an auto accident was filed in common pleas court Friday by Elwood Barber, Lisbon RD 2.

Charles W. Holland, MC 22, East Liverpool, was named the defendant.

Barber claims in his petition that on July 26, 1962 as he was driving on Carroll County Road 25, the defendant drove out of Township Road 257 and struck his car, causing him severe back injuries.

The U.S. Supreme Court, in 1963, classified the tomato as a vegetable because of its common use in the main part of a meal.

Making a Clear Choice

If Sen. Goldwater can stay free of the political tendency to hedge and trim, his Republican presidential candidacy will continue on the theme of his strongly worded acceptance speech.

He will be the champion of the man against the mass—the individual against the state—the “whole man” against the “good society.”

President Johnson has been using “good society” as a framework for his philosophy of government. It is a continuation of the Kennedy New Frontier philosophy, which in turn was a continuation of the New Deal philosophy of the Roosevelt-Truman years.

By political inheritance and presumably by personal inclination, Mr. Johnson is in the role of being an advocate of collectivism—the welfare state.

This will match him with Sen. Goldwater, who by personal inclination and political circumstance, has been made the principal advocate of individualism—the laissez-faire state.

The clear choice that so many politically frustrated Americans have yearned to make between the political parties now emerges.

WITH ALL respect to the hard-working Republicans who worked on the much-argued-about party platform, the Goldwater platform is in the GOP candidate's acceptance speech. The party platform always has been subordinate to the presidential candidate's views, and in 1964 that the candidate's views will transcend both the theme and the particulars that the convention approved.

No one can doubt after Gen. Goldwater's acceptance speech that he is capable of articulating his position. He is by far the ablest spokesman for conservatism of his day.

His speech to the convention in its closing hours was a ringing declaration. For those cynics who had been predicting he would water down his views when his campaign began, the speech was a shock.

There will be no watering down if this is a fair sample.

SEN. GOLDWATER obviously feels that his destiny in U.S. politics is to lead a crusade against communism, co-existence with communism and tolerance of the social and economic tendencies that disturb the American people. He thinks in absolutes, not in relatives. This is the free choice presentation that has been talked about.

Sen. Goldwater would eradicate what plagues Americans, whereas President Johnson would ameliorate some annoyances and learn to live with the rest.

One possibility of this difference in views may be to rearrange the U.S. party system after the pattern of the British system—a right-wing party, a left-wing party and a moderate party, with the latter sometimes holding the balance of power.

IN U.S. PARTIES in recent years, each party has embodied the full spectrum of views.

Each had its rightists, leftists and moderates. This led to a smoothing over of differences that caused so many Americans in recent years to wonder if there really was a fundamental difference between parties.

Sen. Goldwater will try to mark out fundamental differences, such as his versions of individualism against President Johnson's erosion of collectivism—the “good society.”

It is going to be fascinating to watch. With good reason, those who have watched it closely so far are predicting a momentous election. Nothing ever can be the same again if voters ever make a clear choice in a national election between the views of Barry Goldwater and Lyndon Johnson.

Undermining the Foundation

Nothing anyone could say about the murder of Lemuel A. Penn on a highway in Georgia by unknown assassins could be a stronger argument for sanity in this troubled state than the comments by Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders.

The victim of the murder and two other Negroes had been in a summer military training camp at Ft. Benning, Ga. They were on their way home to Washington, where Mr. Penn was director of the capital city's five vocational schools. He was a lieutenant colonel in the Army reserves.

There is no direct evidence of racial murder, but the horrible fact is that Georgia has earned a reputation for racial violence. Gov. Sanders replaced Marvin Griffin in the 1962 election. As governor, Griffin had been forthright champion of race hatred and had pledged total resistance to desegregation. His successor is reaping the whirlwind of seeds of violence and corruption planted as far back as the era of the late U. S. Sen. Theodore.

Bilbo was an infamous apostle of race hatred whose violence and corruption finally caused him to be barred from taking his seat in the Senate in January 1947 by a bipartisan majority of senators led by Ohio's Sen. Robert A. Taft.

Referring to the kind of people capable of committing murder against members of the Negro race in Georgia, Gov. Sanders said:

This unfortunate nonsensical occurrence . . . represents the inflammatory reaction of a person with a demented mind. If we want to see our state destroyed, our citizens demoralized and the very foundation of our nation undermined, we have only to let this type of individual assume greater prominence and eventually take over, and this will be the end of America.”

Southerners, who resent criticism from outside the South, now have heard a fair summary of their problem by the governor of Georgia.

But That Was 1955

Ford Motor Co. might have made as much economic history in 1955 when it offered to sell stock to employees at a 50 per cent discount as it did in 1955 when a $5-a-day wage. But United Auto Workers discouraged the move, because its bargaining strategy that year called for a guaranteed annual wage, instead.

Now it is 1964 and the UAW is bargaining again. This year it is asking the Ford Co. and General Motors to give employees the privilege of acquiring stock with money contributed by the companies.

Specifically, it wants the two companies to credit to workers, for purchase of stock, whatever remains of a five-cent-an-hour deposit in unemployment funds, after the funds have reached the level specified in the contract. The companies pay the five cents an hour.

The issue is whether surplus money belongs to the employers, who pay it in order to fulfill a contract, or to employees. But aside from this issue is the interesting point of a stock-owning option as part of an industrial contract.

Americans were flabbergasted in 1955 when the Ford Co. offer was thumbed down. To many it appeared as though UAW was thumbing down a chance to own stock. But apparently the union was not opposed to owning stock, only to paying for it, even at half price.

UAW is not opposed to capitalism, only to the cost of being a capitalist.

By Truman Twill

They talk extremist but act moderately if given responsibility. Some deceive us deliberately, but many do it because they have a great capacity for misleading themselves. They believe their own guff.

Like gullible people who swallow an extremist line without nuzzling the bait to see if it's real or artificial, these people go for anything dangled before their wigglier eyes, the wigglier the better.

They are the salvation and the bane of politics in our self-governing society. They are its salvation because they are throbingly concerned about public matters and take pro and con position. They are its bane because they are so prone to swallow the hook that anyone can make suckers of them.

THIS YEAR they will be found on both sides of the dividing line, as always. Some will gulp down everything self-proclaimed conservatives dangle in front of them; others will swallow everything self-proclaimed liberals put on the hook.

Might there be a really realistic and reliable division of the American people for the purpose of holding an election someday? Probably not.

It would need to be a division between gullibles and cynics—and that would be the end of a people's democracy.

The gullibles would believe anything and the cynics would believe nothing. They'd ruin us.

THIS CAUSES many of us to point out when pressed about our place in the political spectrum that we prefer to be “moderates,” meaning we reserve the right to choose among the views of all the people who keep trying to divide the American people into camps of extremists.

We take extremism with the proverbial grain of salt, because we have learned something about extremists.

Answer To A Proposal

Doctor Gap Widens

By JOSEPH MICHALAK

The United States Public Health Service has estimated that it will take about 11,000 medical graduates a year by 1970 to keep the country in healthy condition. That's almost 3,500 a year more than are now being turned out by the nation's 87 medical colleges, and the total produced increases at an annual rate of only about 100.

To close that doctor gap was one of the aims of the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act, passed by the Congress last September. The trouble is that the Congress — 10 months later — still has not appropriated any part of the $236 million authorized.

Meanwhile, bids for a piece of the melon have been piling up in the offices of the Public Health Service's division of hospital and medical facilities, which is to administer the program. The bids total many times over what the government intends to disburse.

The biggest part of the three-year program — $175 million — involves money for construction. Three of every $5 of this total will be spent on new or improved medical, nursing or pharmacy schools.

THE REST is to be divided equally between new dental facilities in all medical fields.

For construction, the government will put up to two-thirds of the cost, and the schools working on plans for at least 15 would have to raise the rest from other sources.

In addition, $61 million will go into low-interest loans — limited to $2,000 a year per student — through 1969.

As of this week, the PHS had received more than 250 “letters of intent” from schools explaining that federal funds were needed to start a new medical facility or to improve an established one. Of these, 95 were for medical-school projects from the 87 existing schools and a dozen or so new ones in various states of planning.

If all the letters were acted on, PHS officials said, the government would have to lay out more than a billion dollars. To get a more realistic picture of the job, the agency asked those filing the letters of intent to post formal applications by May 5 for the first stage of grants hopefully totaling $100 million.

This total was more than doubly over-subscribed. About $140 million of the requests came from 27 medical-school applications alone. These are now undergoing on-site inspections by PHS officials.

THE NEED in the medical-school area is especially acute, and blueprints for new schools are being drafted at an unprecedented rate. While only 10 new schools were created in the last 25 years, physicians and other interested groups are working on plans for at least 15

new ones that should be ready before another decade passes.

Typical of these is one in the making at Rutgers University, which started working on the idea more than two years ago.

It has already received a large grant from the Kellogg Foundation for organization and planning, and hopes to have its first class in the fall of 1966.

As of June 30, the university had collected about $3 million, about two-thirds of it earmarked for construction. The projected cost of the school and equipment is between $10 million and $12 million, of which Rutgers hopes to raise $4 million from private sources and the balance from the federal government on a two-dollars-for-one matching basis.

AMONG OTHER new two or four-year medical schools that are likely to get strong consideration for federal support are the following:

Mount Sinai Hospital, which hopes to open a $35 million, 35-story medical center building in New York.

Public Health Service officials have said that federal expenditures ultimately will have to reach at least $750 million must for new medical schools.

Right now they would settle reluctantly for the $75 million start that the House approved recently for all kinds of medical facilities — new or old. They can't wait for the Senate to take its mind off presidential politics long enough to get the program rolling.

The Poverty Scheme

By Dr. GEORGE S. BENSON
President, National Education Program

Among others, Richard Nixon has made quips about President Johnson's war on poverty. He remarked that Mr. Johnson was able to use at the same time both prosperity and poverty to advance his political fortunes. (Was there a glint of admiration behind this wit?)

With voters this year being offered this double come-on, Mr. Johnson will probably be hard to beat. The whole basic appeal is time-tested from New Deal days, that the government can make, maintain or restore prosperity. Of course, the validity of it remains to be proven. That doesn't prevent a politician from making a play with it.

THE PRESIDENT also has insisted that he is a believer in free enterprise. But when he shows that he favors socialistic schemes to be sponsored by the federal government, one wonders. Mr. Johnson may not be concerned whether he is consistent. He is not the first to borrow from socialist sources.

In this instance, Sargent Shriver's chief idea man, who operates openly as a socialist, is reputed to have put across the plans for the “poverty war.” This socialist was a consultant for the plan long before it was even presented to Congress.

He is Michael Harrington, whose assumptions about poverty in his book, The Other America, can be seriously challenged. His picture of 50 million poverty-stricken Americans in the midst of general prosperity has probably shaken some American readers and made aghast our friends abroad. Fifty million is a highly inflated figure, even with a most liberal definition of what poverty is. Nevertheless, Mr. Harrington's socialist remedy for American problems has been too much for practical politicians to resist.

IF THE AMERICAN DREAM, a hope for generations past of Europe's tired and poor, must condemn one out of five to a destitute existence, should the system be continued?

Such a question comes, you see, from this distorted picture that includes no reference to the wonderful opportunities that do exist in America. It is a miserable disservice, if politics in America requires this kind of talk to elect and re-elect. For political parties to requisition billions of public spending to get votes in this manner is a tragic betrayal of public responsibility.

Neither does a call for billion action, calling it a war on poverty.

If the U. S. really has 50 million paupers, more than it had in the Great Depression, a billion dollars will not be nearly enough to accomplish the feat of making them all well-off by government fiat. This is a fact the liberals recognize, for they are saying that many, many billions more will be required.

When the President, according to Harrington, tells the world that 25 per cent of our people are in miserable circumstances, this misleading and generalized view is enough to upset the belief of some people in the American Dream. If free enterprise can't beat that, the Frenchman might conclude, then France may as well go all the way to collectivism.

If Americans are poor through no fault of their own, an Italian could say, my cousins will leave that unjust land and return to the old country. If the government has to make work to keep Americans from starving, the Swede would add, then socialism has proved its superiority.

IF THE AMERICAN DREAM, a hope for generations past of Europe's tired and poor, must condemn one out of five to a destitute existence, should the system be continued?

Such a question comes, you see, from this distorted picture that includes no reference to the wonderful opportunities that do exist in America. It is a miserable disservice, if politics in America requires this kind of talk to elect and re-elect. For political parties to requisition billions of public spending to get votes in this manner is a tragic betrayal of public responsibility.

Neither does a call for billion action, calling it a war on poverty.

What could a national leader say, instead of testifying about perpetual poverty amidst our greatest prosperity and parroting the socialist aphorisms?

If a president of the U. S. really wants to reduce economic distress, let him recognize that the real answer to poverty in the nation is a greater measure of economic freedom, not political demagoguery. Let him recognize that our free market economy operating by its own rules and principles, makes room for everyone to reach his highest level.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Faith's Challenge

There is something very special about a boy and his dog. The dog so obviously wants nothing more than to devote his life to his small master. He takes his boy on faith . . . and, inevitably, the boy lives up to it.

For faith creates a challenge. If someone believes something good of you, you find yourself eager to measure up to that standard.

God looks for the best in all of us. Regardless of what may have happened yesterday we are, today, welcome in His Church. He has faith in us. Should we have less than faith in Him?

Our Gals Are On the Move

News item with a London dateline: "British doctors and psychiatrists are combating an ailment reported spreading among housewives—women who find themselves mentally unable to leave their homes without suffering attacks of the weeps and the shakes."

Well, that's one ailment we don't have to worry about crossing the Atlantic and attacking the women of America.

If there's one thing that housewives in this country do at every opportunity it's GET OUT OF THE HOUSE.

How to 'Cook' a Husband

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Some old-fashioned recipes tickle the fancy.

One that may tickle yours appears in a book called "How to Cook A Husband" by Elizabeth Strong Worthington, published in 1898 and long out of print. Mrs. Worthington wrote that she came across the recipe in a newspaper clipping that attributed the rule to "a Baltimore lady."

In the 66 years since Elizabeth Worthington's book the husband-cooking recipe has cropped up at least once in a decade, usually in a local cook book compiled by a group of women to aid some worthy cause. But these later versions, if my cook-book reading memory holds good, sometimes stray from the version Mrs. Worthington reprinted. Here it is:

HOW TO COOK A HUSBAND (1898 version)

By A Baltimore Lady
A great many husbands are spoilt by mismanagement. Some women go about it as if their husbands were bladders, and blow them up; others keep them constantly in hot water; others let them freeze, by their carelessness and indifference. Some keep them in a stew, by irritating ways and words; others roast them; some keep them in pickle all their lives. Now it is not to be supposed that any husband will be good, managed in this way — turnips wouldn't; onions wouldn't; cabbageheads wouldn't, and husbands won't; but they are really delicious when properly treated.

"In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying mackerel, or by the golden tint, as if you wanted salmon. Be sure to select him yourself, as taste differs. And by the way, don't go to market for him, as the best are always brought to your door.

"It is far better to have none, unless you patiently learn to cook him. A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is the best, but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin, it will do, with care.

"See that the linen, in which you wrap him, is nicely washed and mended, with the required amount of buttons and strings, to any organization her husband belongs to, or a mother's club in the cult of togetherness that takes mama along wherever pa goes; in the spread of women's clubs and organizations that keep housewives on the go.

IT'S NOT HAVING TO leave her house that gives the American housewife an attack of the weeps and the shakes. It's being forced by cruel circumstances—to remain housebound for a week or two that gets her down.

There are probably husbands in this country who wouldn't mind if their wives did get a mild case of stay-at-homeitis. But they shouldn't get their hopes up. It can't happen here.

Leetonia Pushes Driver Education

Students Benefit From Required Instruction

LEETONIA — Here, learning to drive a car is not left to chance. Unless you're physically handicapped, you either learn to drive or you don't graduate from high school.

Driver training has been as mandatory as English, history or science at Leetonia High School for a half dozen years and its effectiveness has been partly illustrated by the low numbers of Leetonia graduates who are traffic offenders in County Juvenile Court.

Judge Louis A. Tobin has had high praise for the compulsory program, believed to be the only required driver course in Columbiania County.

Few, if any, students have lodged complaints about having to learn to drive. To the contrary, most of them consider themselves lucky for the chance. And the cost is low: only $6, compared to four or five times that amount for commercial driving lessons.

Only a handful of boys or girls who were unable physically to take the course have missed the practical education, so vital to survival in today's mobile society.

The classroom work is carried on while school is in session. The laboratory—the actual driving lessons—are given in the leisure hours of summer.

Thirty-six hours of learning are required in the classroom,

"SLOW ON THE CURVES" — Leetonia driving instructor David Pavlansky gives high school pupil RuthAnn Dattilio a few pointers before she starts out on a road lesson. Leetonia High is believed to be the only county school where driver training is mandatory.

according to state standards and 24 hours in the car. In Leetonia students spend eight hours behind the wheel although only six hours are required. Some driving is done each day. The balance of the time the pupil is observing and learning from his fellow classmate's experience.

Women Engineers

They're Feminine — And So Bright

Engineers in the United States now number a million. How many are women?

"About 6,000, half of whom are holding jobs now," says Isabelle French, newly elected president of the Society of Women Engineers. The society, which has a membership of 800, recently held its 14th annual convention in New York.

Statistically then, Miss French is one of about 0.3 percent of practicing engineers in this country who are women.

THE AVERAGE woman engineer, according to a recent society study, is about 36 years of age, employed by private industry and paid $9,100 annually. She has a bachelor's degree in engineering or in one of the physical sciences, in addition to some advanced training.

Probably she graduated in the upper 10 or 15 per cent of her class, but to get a job in engineering she had to persevere more than her male colleagues.

She may or may not be married. If she is, her trip down the aisle was taken at a later age than most women do it — her late 20s or early 30s — and she has three children. She often marries a professional man, and usually stays married to him.

In spite of this study, the image of the woman engineer is often that of an odd, mannish creature climbing scaffolding or welding a slide rule without thought of feminine decorum or decoration.

Trim, bespectacled, with a fresh complexion and short, graying hair, Miss French does not fit the prevailing stereotype.

"We have women who are masculine," she shrugs, "but there are also men that are feminine. A majority of our women are quite feminine. The fact that 80 per cent are married indicated something."

Miss French thinks there are so few women in the field because of the way children are brought up: "Little girls play with dolls, little boys tinker."

An admitted tomboy, she decided in high school to become an engineer.

in her home workshop, plays golf, likes to camp out.

She says she has never faced discouragement or bias because of her sex.

"A woman engineer is noticed more frequently than a man because she is different. Often times she'll get certain job opportunities a man will not."

"But some women feel they cannot advance into higher level management because of the possibility of having to drop out for family commitments."

"I think more women should go into engineering, but only because they like it. And no one can succeed in any profession unless they are properly qualified."

MOST ENGINEERING students are interviewed in college and their grade average carefully inspected by interested companies. "But men being men, they could be swayed by a good-looking coed," she admits.

"Nevertheless, ability counts. Ability has lasting quality."

More women go into the electronics and aerospace industries, she says. "Maybe this is because they're new industries with young men who accept women more readily. That's not so true in the older established fields, such as power or building, although there are some very capable women there."

In her presidential capacity Miss French will try to interest more women in becoming engineers.

"But we're not trying to match the Russians who boast that 30 per cent of technical manpower is womanpower. Our social mores would prohibit this. I think 5 to 10 per cent is an attainable goal."

Fashion Tips

Mix 'n' Match

Nothing stretches a travel wardrobe better than co-ordinates. You can mix and match to your heart's content and get many days wear out of a few items.

Velvet Touch

You may think that cotton and velvet don't mix. But in late summer, you'll find that you can add a dressy touch to dark, transitional cottons if you wear them with a velvet hat.

Fabric "Reduces"

Fabrics play as important a role as style when it comes to flattering your figure. If you are on the heavy side, stay away from shiny materials and heavy, bulky tweeds.

Wash Gloves Soon

When you come home from a date, go straight to the washbasin and with your white fabric gloves on your hands, wash them out and hang them to dry. It takes only a minute and you have fresh gloves waiting for the next time they're needed.

For Free Movement

To keep pace with fashions created for active outdoor living, new lingerie is being designed for freer movement. The newest example is a pant-slip which combines the two under-pinnings. It comes in eight different styles for wear under different sportswear silhouettes.

Mix 'em Up

Just because you buy costume jewelry in sets, you needn't wear it that way. Try mixing up those bracelets, earrings and necklaces that are in the same color or metal. The effect will be less monotonous.

Independent Hose Advances In Hot Stove Tourney

Triumphs 12-4 Over Westville

Other Salem Squads Lose In Thrillers

Independent Hose was the only Salem team to advance in the Sectional Hot Stove baseball tourney, but all other city entries made fine showings despite losses Friday.

Manager Bill Miller led his powerful Class H aggregation to a 12-4 triumph over Westville (Sebring No. 1) at Kelley Field. It was the 14th straight for the winners.

Moose gave up a pair of runs in the second inning and was never able to catch up as it dropped a 3-2 decision to Home-Worth Lions at Buckeye Field.

Knights of Columbus, held hitless through the first five frames tried to comeback but found Sherrodsville's margin too much in a 5-2 defeat, in Class G action at Memorial Park.

Purity Dairy - Beloit Ruritan knocked off Al's Isaly's - Peoples Federal Bank of Leetonia 9-3.

IN AN EXTRA INNING contest, Alliance Jaycees came up with two runs in the bottom of the ninth to nip Fishers News 6-5 in Class F competition.

Falling behind 10-4 early in the game, Amsterdam rallied in the late innings to trim Alliance Lexington Ruritans 12-10.

Bliss couldn't find its batting eye and was shut out 4-0 by Alliance East-End AC in Class E.

Bill Helman tossed a one-hitter for Independent Hose. He struck out nine and gave up four walks.

THE WINNERS iced the game in the top of the fourth, scoring six runs. Walks accounted for four of the runs. Only hit during the frame was a single by Dave Barnes. He also belted a home run in the third inning.

Barry Benedict was the only batter on Westville's squad to get a hit. He singled in the third inning.

Losing hurler S'vee Greenawalt walked, and advanced on an error, and both runners scored on a single by Beamer.

Close hit a triple and scored the deciding run in the fifth for the winners.

Tom Dominic socked a double in the first inning, and Dale Odorizzi singled in the second for Moose's only hits.

Knights of Columbus, down 5-0, picked up a run in the sixth as Jon Pukalski and Rick Alexander hit back-to-back singles.

The losers added another marker in the seventh on a single by Neil Walker, two balks by the pitcher, an interference play, and a sacrifice.

Carl Penick, Jack Sharp, Lee Rusty and John Stocker, who belted a home run, paced Sherrodsville with two hits apiece.

PURITY DAIRY - BELOIT Ruritan scored in every inning but the fifth. Joan Campbell, Frank Bailey and Chuck Campbell each had three hits, Greg Wilson and Doug Rockwell had two apiece.

Larry Smith sparked Leetonia Al's Isaly's - Peoples Federal Bank with a home run in the fourth.

A hit batter and error gave Alliance Jaycees its victory over Fishers News.

Down 4-0, the Salem unit tied the score in the sixth on a couple of walks, passed ball, singles by Votaw and Filler and a

Stuart's 2 Homers Power Bosox To 5-0 Triumph; Orioles Romp

By DICK COUCH

Dick Stuart has been eased out and shut out in two American League All-Star polls. He is not a favorite son candidate for 1964's Golden Glove award.

But Old Stone Fingers is first in the hearts of a couple of countrymen.

When big Stu batted in the sixth inning of Boston's 5-0 victory over Washington Friday night, some of the Fenway Park faithful hoisted a banner proclaiming: "Dick Stuart, greatest American since Ted Williams."

Whereupon the patriot hit his second two-run homer of the evening and boosted his league-leading RBI figure to 77.

Stuart may not be this nation's answer to the Red Menace. He doesn't even expect to hit .400 this year (current batting average .264). But, like former Red Sox great Williams, he can rattle those friendly Fenway Park fences.

The National League alumnus' second homer was his 22nd of the season and sixth in five games, beginning last Monday against the Senators. Stuart has driven in 14 runs during the spurt and appears certain to top his 1963 league-leading total of 118 RBI.

Costly Error Helps Phils Edge Cincy 5-4; Giants Dumped 5-2

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

It didn't take Don Pavletich too long to make a mark for himself.

Less than an inning, in fact. The mark, however, was a red face resulting from a rare and costly error that helped first-place Philadelphia edge Cincinnati 5-4 Friday night and move one game ahead of San Francisco in the National League race.

Pavletich played with Cincinnati last season but was assigned to San Diego of the Pacific Coast League this year. Thanks to an injury to John Edwards, the Reds' regular catcher, Pavletich battled his way to the majors.

He made his first appearance Friday night walking as a pinch hitter for starting catcher Hal Smith in the seventh inning. Then came his 1964 catching debut in the eighth.

Pinch hitter Danny Cater opened the inning with a single. With Costen Shockley at bat, Pavletich tossed the ball back to pitcher Bill Henry. The ball, however, went astray, landing behind the reliever. Before anyone could recover it, Cater raced to second.

Shockley grounded out, sending Cater to third from where he scored on Clay Dalrymple's squeeze bunt.

The run seemed somewhat harmless at the time, as it gave the Phillies a 3-3 lead. But Vada Pinson homered for the Reds' final run in the eighth.

Philadelphia Manager Gene Mauch credited Cater with alert base running on the play, but Reds' Manager Fred Hutchinson undoubtedly had another way of saying it.

The Giants also had some error trouble in losing to Houston 5-2. Los Angeles nipped Chicago 3-2 and St. Louis trimmed New York 9-8 in other National League games. Rain washed out a doubleheader between Pittsburgh and Milwaukee.

Pavletich wasn't the only Red to commit a costly error. A wild throw by Steve Boros helped the Phillies load the bases in the seventh inning before Tony Taylor singled in a run that broke a 2-2 tie. Then, Johnny Callison popped to Leo Cardenas, and Bobby Wine scampered home as catcher Smith let Cardenas' throw get past him.

Callison hit a two-run homer and Boros did the same for Cincinnati.

Jonathan Winters Says 'Real Life' Comedy Not 'Sick'

By JONATHAN WINTERS

NEW YORK (AP) — For a time now, some television humor has been dominated by dim-witted mothers, out-witted fathers and half-wit ideots. These characters, backed by teams of writers, working in relays, have one thing in common—no connection with reality.

Now, however, a different sort of comedy is beginning to emerge. It's called improvisational comedy and it's based on trying—without careful, slick preparation—to get at the truth. People laugh because, in addition to the humor, they recognize the truth.

I'm prejudiced in favor of improvisational comedy. A lot of people—including some television producers—insist that the sort of humor I'm talking about is "sick." Funny thing is there's one television show with a man who gets advice from a horse—and they call this healthy?

Improvisational humor also is regarded, by some timid souls, as "to far out" for television.

What kind of person claims we're "too far out?" It's the same guy you've heard saying, "I never discuss politics or religion." He's the same guy who never discussed the race issue.

But look at what's happening now in that corner because of years of brushing it under a carpet of silence.

Humor, after all, is just a reflection of the times in which we live. With the world today, a small one, we can't afford NOT to discuss things any more.

Television is the place where improvisational humor can really grow, as audiences are beginning to get tired of accepting twenty or thirty hours of comedy a week based on an unreal, unlikely group of hillbillies stuck in the middle of Beverly Hills when Peter Lawford is barred from an apartment in the middle of Manhattan.

Improvisation also is peculiarly suited to television because it emphasizes the one quality that television presents best—spontaneity.

upon truth is the only real humor. A man is a real humorist only if he's the creation of his own wit and not only the wit of 14 writers laboring for a week.

And as for basing humor upon real life, the only answer I have is that, if you don't laugh, you'll cry, which is better?

Some people say to me, "some of these things you write loses you customers." I know it does but I don't mind much.

Last year we enjoyed the biggest increase ever and this year it looks like it will be even bigger, the increase I mean.

We are firm believers in advertising if we loose a customer we get at least one more to take his place.

If we sit out here in the country and kept our mouths shut no one would know we were here.

Our customers are great people, a hardy bunch, I'm proud of every one of them.

Rev. W. S. Longsworth, pastor of the First Methodist Church, officiated and burial was in Standing Rock Cemetery, Kent.

He is survived by his parents, of 1175 Norwood, Kent, and grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Bichsel of Salem.

In lieu of remembrances, the family favors donations to Akron Children's Hospital.

vaccine in animal bite cases.

A group here may be close to purifying the rabies virus for the first time. Once this is done, scientists can explore precisely what effect the virus has on the key genetic structures of living cells, he says.

The number of rabies cases in domesticated animals each year has steadily dropped over the last decade from 3,000 to about 600. During the same period, rabies in wild animals has been increasing from 700 to nearly 3,000 cases a year. Since 1960 wild animals have had the greater number of cases, the health service reports.

The traditional animal hosts for rabies are dogs, foxes and skunks. In recent years, however, CDC has added raccoons and bats to the list.

If it could be definitely established that some animal—the opossum, for example—carried the disease and spread it without itself becoming diseased, scientists then would have a vital clue toward understanding rabies.

The identification of a host would go a long way toward explaining the persistent nature of rabies, Scholtens says.

it, left Wednesday without permission.

According to the captain's report, the ship was pursued by a Soviet patrol boat flying international signals with orders to return. When it failed to heed the order, a Soviet naval craft fired three rounds across the bow of the ship, the State Department said.

Wirtz will cite to members of the House Labor Committee figures showing that the number of overtime hours worked last month was at an all-time high.

"We had 5 million out of work last week and 16 million worked overtime," Wirtz said in announcing the record factory overtime figure of 3.2 hours per week.

The ship, owned by Nautilus Petroleum Carriers Corp. of New York City, carried a cargo loaded in Canada but owned by Cargill, Inc., of Minneapolis.

A Labor Department spokesman estimates that if all overtime could be translated into new full-time jobs, 900,000 would be created.

The administration bill would boost overtime pay from time and one-half to double time in certain industries to encourage the hiring of new workers.

The greatest difficulty in creating new employment through discouraging overtime is that unemployment is concentrated heavily among unskilled, uneducated workers, while overtime work is largely in skilled trades.

The proposed bill would increase the "penalty rate" for where it is determined that there is both considerable overtime and unemployment among workers who could handle the jobs available.

The romance began nearly five years ago. Mrs. Tebbenjohanns came to stay in the United States a year ago from her native Dusseldorf.

Mrs. Teffenjohanns became interested in the Sheppard case and in 1959 wrote the family that she believed Sheppard is innocent.

The doctor is free on order of a U.S. district court judge who held Wednesday that Sheppard didn't get a fair trial when convicted of second-degree murder in Cleveland in 1954.

However, a U.S. court of appeals later issued a stay that overruled the order which permitted Sheppard's freedom, but did not call for his rearrest.

Authorities are expected to file a motion to return Sheppard to prison.

Carter A. Lehman, 74, Lisbon RD 5, received a $5 suspended fine for failing to yield right-of-way. Paul Jackson, 27, Lisbon RD 2 and Collin Neal, 34, of East Liverpool, each $5 suspended fines for speeding.

Assistant Priest Assigned Here

The Rev. Francis Zappitelli, assistant at St. Peter Church in Canton, since May, 1962, has been assigned to St. Paul Catholic Church here as assistant. He will assume his duties July 25 upon his return from vacation.

Rev. Zappitelli, a native of Conneaut, was assigned to Salem by the Youngstown Diocese, of which Salem and Canton are a part.

He attended Vaiparaiso, Ind., Technical Institute and Gannon College at Erie, Pa., before entering St. Gregory Minor Seminary in Cincinnati. He completed his studies for the priesthood at Mt. St. Mary of the West Seminary at Norwood.

He fills the vacancy created here when Rev. Kevin Coleman left on a new assignment at Timken Mercy Hospital in Canton.

Rev. J. Richard Gaffney is pastor of St. Paul's parish.

pay increase for 1.7 million federal civilian employees and officials.

In addition to the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, the increases would apply to the Coast Guard, Public Health Service and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Goldwater

can presidents—George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt—took what he considers extreme steps "when defending our freedoms."

"I would like the governor, for my benefit and for the benefit of the party and the people of America, to put down in writing his definition of extremism," Goldwater said.

"Goldwater told a reporter 'extremism in politics is either fascism on one side or communism on the other.'

That definition did not mesh with the context of his acceptance address.

When a reporter asked him about it in Phoenix, Goldwater replied, "You read the speech and if you can't understand it you don't deserve to be a reporter."

Goldwater's getaway day in San Francisco was a hectic one. In rapid succession he:

—Talked campaign strategy with Burch;

—Conferred with Rep. William E. Miller of New York, his vice presidential running mate;

—Offered President Johnson some advice on the Democratic ticket;

—Slapped at Sherman Adams, once top aide to Eisenhower.

Goldwater—who has promised to put patronage in the hands of the Republican National Committee and state chairmen—told reporters, "It used to drive me crazy to pick up a newspaper to read that a Democrat was appointed to office by a Republican administration." He blamed Adams for making such appointments under Eisenhower.

Goldwater told the national committee that under his direction as the party's head man, it will be greatly strengthened "with its powers returned and the president working through it."

The senator said Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the late President John F. Kennedy, would be Johnson's best bet as a running mate.

Meanwhile, a friend of Goldwater's said the senator would formally launch his presidential campaign in Prescott, Ariz., where he launched his career in national politics in 1952 by going after a seat in the Senate. The formal kickoff reportedly would come shortly before Labor Day.

Goldwater is expected to return to Washington late Sunday. The Senate resumes its session Monday after a convention recess.

Reservists

members of the reserve components by denying them employment, retention, promotion and other advantages . . . This situation has further deteriorated since the Berlin crisis."

Several hundred Ohio Guardsmen were called to active duty during the 1961-62 Berlin crisis.

Hosstetter points out that both the federal "Universal Military Training and Service Act" and state law protect the part-time soldier. But he is urging that cooperative efforts with local chambers be attempted to resolve specific problems.

Brig. Gen. Frederick P. Werner, assistant adjutant general for air, says it's a bit early yet to tell if the effort is bearing fruit. He calls it "an education program" and says the department has high hopes.

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce has notified local chambers that its policy is to encourage employers to grant equal benefits, promotion opportunities and leaves of absence for training to reservists.

Hints From Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Heloise: For those who do not wear stockings:

I line my shoes with fresh facial tissue each time I put them on. Double thickness is even better.

The facial tissue absorbs the perspiration from my feet, keeps the shoe from sticking, and adds to the life of the shoe.

CORA V. CLARK.

And, gals, I tested this for two months and it's wonderful.

I found that I could fold the tissue in half, put it on the bottom of my foot, turn the end of the tissue up and over my toes, and put my foot into the shoe. The tissue keeps the inner lining of your shoe from wrinkling and the moisture from your feet from soiling your shoe. Not only that, but it makes it easier to put your foot into your shoe! And, oh, how comfortable. I was one who could never put a shoe on without hose until this idea came in.

A doctor suggested that men whose feet perspire profusely could, before putting on their dark socks, wrap their feet in one or two facial tissues, THEN put on their socks and this would absorb the excess perspiration.

HELOISE.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE: When my children were small I would sometimes greet my husband with: "The children helped me today but I got through anyhow."

Just being able to laugh about it always helped.

DEAR HELOISE: As I do most of my own sewing, I have found another wonderful use for your nylon net?
